INVITATION TO SUPPORT BPS ASM 2024

Dear Industry Partners,

It is our great pleasure to invite you to the 57th Annual Scientific Meeting of the British Pain Society, from 4-6th June, in the historic city of Nottingham, England.

The Scientific Programme of the Meeting always reflects the multidisciplinary nature of our Society, and this year is no exception. The format includes topical debates, lectures, workshops, and sessions which will stimulate further scientific and clinical discussion.

The BPS Annual Scientific Meeting will include new developments and research relevant to the pain community, as well as featuring discussions on challenging and controversial topics related to clinical practice and healthcare policies. This meeting provides professionals in the field of pain the opportunity to exchange ideas with leading researchers, experienced clinicians, and industry partners through a variety of networking possibilities.

Besides the excellent scientific programme, we hope that you will have the opportunity to enjoy Nottingham's vibrant culture and rich and historic past. From castles to caves, this green and open city boasts a wide selection of things to see and do. It is home to several high-level sporting teams and world-leading educational institutions, Nottingham has been the backdrop to many important innovations and inventions in pain medicine. It was in Nottingham that Sir Peter Mansfield made the breakthrough that led to the development of MRI scanning, and where Dr Stewart Adams OBE discovered ibuprofen.

We look forward to welcoming you.

Sincerely,

Professor Roger Knaggs
BPS President

Professor Ed Keogh
Scientific Programme Committee Chair

ABOUT BPS

The British Pain Society is the oldest and largest multidisciplinary professional organisation in the field of pain within the UK. Chronic pain is suffered by over a third of the population. It is commonly distressing and commonly highly disabling. It is devastating for individuals who suffer. Many cannot work and lose their jobs.

Treatment of pain is a fundamental human right, yet sadly there is an enormous gap between the care people require and what happens in practice. We also do not know enough about the cause and treatment of pain. Our alliance of professionals works collaboratively with patients and industry partners to advance the understanding and management of pain. We strive to reduce the suffering of people enduring daily pain.

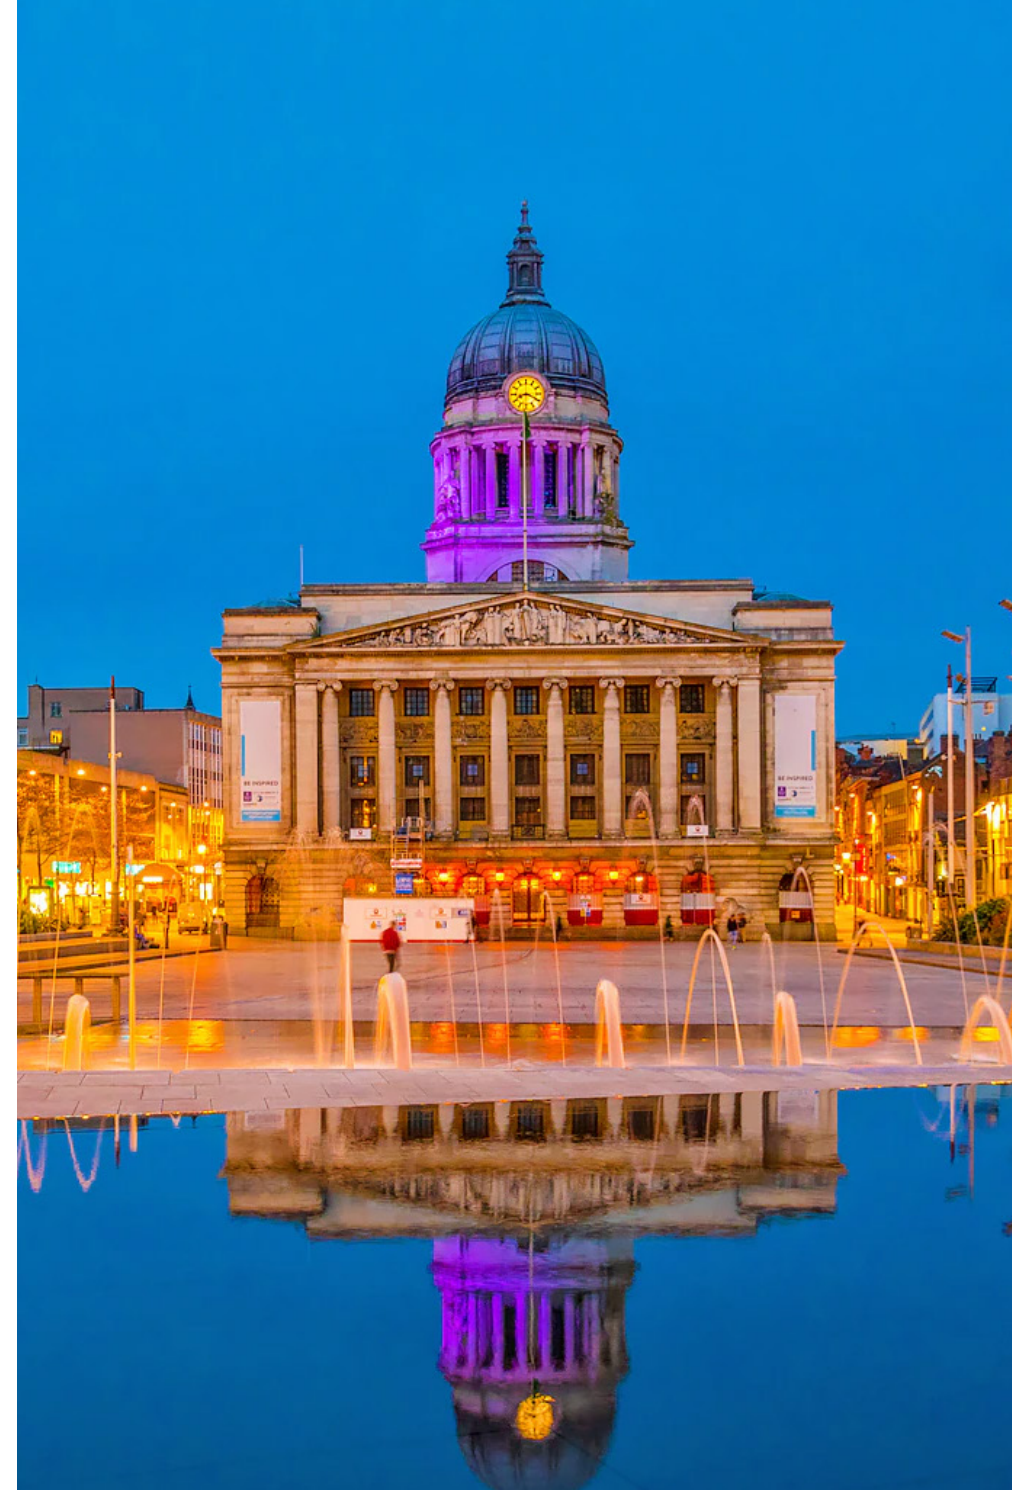

Our multidisciplinary nature is pivotal in making The British Pain Society a uniquely relevant representative body on all matters relating to pain.

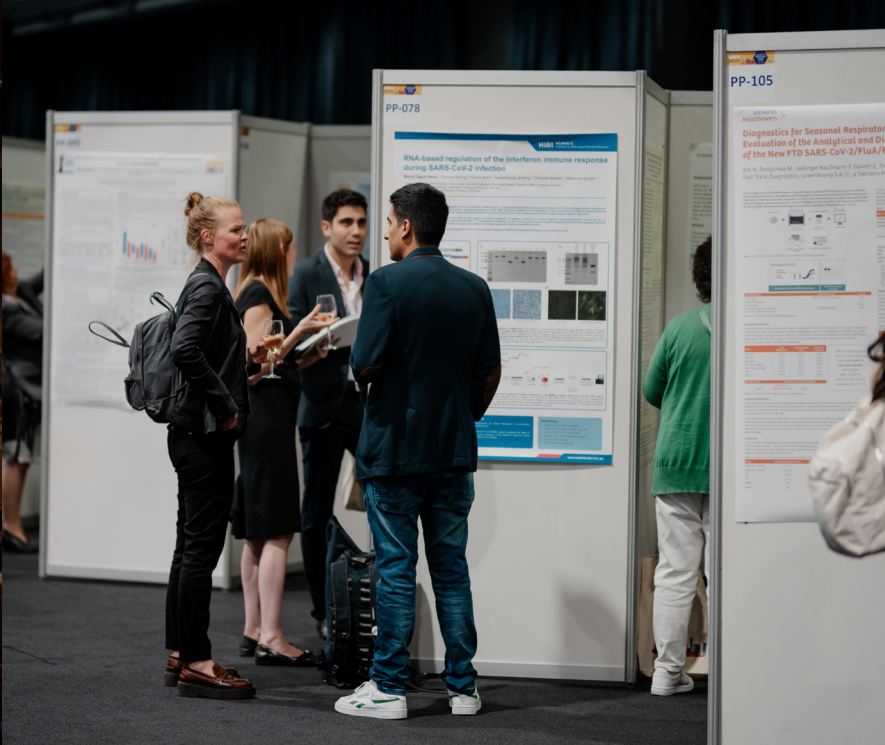

The Society was first registered as a charity on 29 November 1979 as the Intractable Pain Society of Great Britain and Ireland with a membership limited primarily to anaesthetists working in pain clinics. Over time, the membership of the Society became increasingly multidisciplinary and in 1988, the Society changed its name to the Pain Society. From this point until mid 2004, the Society's membership and activities continued to grow.

In May 2008, The British Pain Society also became a charity registered in Scotland.

Today the British Pain Society has a membership of over 800 and is a uniquely relevant representative body on all matters relating to pain.

The British Pain Society aims to promote education, training, research and development in all fields of pain. It endeavours to increase both professional and public awareness of the prevalence of pain and the facilities that are available for its management. The Society is involved in all aspects of pain and its management through the work of the Council, various Committees, Special Interest Groups and Working Parties and via its publications, Annual Scientific Meeting and educational seminars.
